

National SENCO Workload Survey

Participant consent information

Thank you for considering taking part in an online survey for the National Special Educational Needs Coordinator (SENCO) Workload Survey. Please also see the information sheet for further details regarding the project. Please click here or return to the website and click the link.

The National SENCO workload survey has been granted ethical approval from the Institute for Education, Bath Spa University. Dr Helen Curran is a member of BERA, as such the research project follows BERA guidelines (2018) as part of the Association's Code of Conduct.

At the start of the survey you will be asked:

'Are you a practising SENCO in the UK and do you consent for your response data to be collated for analysis and reported as part of this research project? All contributions are anonymous.'

By clicking 'yes' you are agreeing to the following statements:

I understand the nature of the research. (please refer to the information sheet – see above)
I agree to taking part in one online survey.
I understand that my participation is voluntary.
I am aware of my right to withdraw at any time, without giving notice or any reason, up until the point that I submit the completed survey.
I give my consent for sharing data within the SENCO research study team.
I give my consent for sharing data through data sharing repositories in line with University data management protocol.
I understand that the data may be used as part of a publication and I give my consent for the data to be used.
I understand that my contribution will be anonymised throughout and no information which may make me identifiable will be requested.
I understand that data will only be used for the SENCO workload research study.

If you have any queries or concerns regarding the project or how the data will be used, please contact Dr Helen Curran on h.curran@bathspa.ac.uk

Thank you